

HYPERLEDGER FOUNDATION

Hyperledger Foundation

A global, cross-industry consortium of projects, member companies and communities advancing blockchain technologies.

What is Hyperledger Foundation? What Makes it Unique?

An Open Source not-for-profit accelerating the development and adoption of business blockchain technologies. Businesses with the most stringent blockchain requirements trust Hyperledger because:

Hosted by The Linux Foundation, the experts at accelerating open technology development and commercial adoption

Neutral and collaborative, Hyperledger will always:

- be open to all who wish to participate
- produce open source technologies
- remain immune to the commercial interests of any single company

Industry-standard blockchains by business for business

Hyperledger blockchain technologies emphasize key enterprise requirements:

- Support for differing levels of access
- Sub-universal validation
- Cross-chain transactions
- Modularity

Foster and coordinate the premier community of developers building enterprise grade open source software, in the form of platforms, libraries, tools and solutions, for multiparty systems using blockchain, distributed ledger, and related technologies.

If you haven't been involved in an open source community before it can be intimidating to start participating.

Here are some tips for how to get comfortable:

Feel free to lurk

Seeing how other community members interact will help you adjust and learn the social norms in the community

Don't wait for an invitation

Our tools and meetings are open by default, so jump in and introduce yourself, ask questions and share ideas

Read our Code of Conduct

We've set and enforce high standards of professional practice from everyone you'll be meeting

Linux Foundation ID (LFID)

Linux Foundation ID (LFID) is a free account that identifies you and securely provides access to web sites of The Linux Foundation, our projects, and our service providers. Go to identity.linuxfoundation.org to set up.

In order to participate in the Hyperledger Chat rooms (powered by Rocket chat) or edit the Hyperledger Wiki (powered by Confluence), all community members need to have a LFID. See instructions and video on

Working Groups (WGs)

WGs are focused on building community around different technical challenges faced by the Hyperledger community

All WGs are open and you are welcome to join one by:

- Subscribe to the group's mailing list or chat channel and introduce yourself
- Dial-in to an upcoming meeting to take part in discussions and share what you're doing
- Add your name to the group's member directory so people can connect with you

Links to all of these are on each WG's wiki page.
